Four generations gather to celebrate Grandparents Day 2004 in Elk Point

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

"It's a special, special thing" to be a grandparent, Elk Point Mayor Lyle Frisby told the crowd at Sunday's celebration of Grandparents Day. The mayor and his wife Pam recently became grandparents when daughter Amanda gave birth to a son.

"Now we know what grandparents have and enjoy with their grandchildren."

The celebration at the Elk Point Seniors Recreation Centre followed a walk-a-thon involving all ages, and a stroller-rider or two. The walk raised "just a few pennies less than $3000", according to Alberta Council on Aging president Diana Anderson, who spearheaded the event. Sixty percent of the funds went to the ACA's projects, while the remaining 40 percent, equaling $1124, will assist Elk Point seniors with the utilities on their centre.

Anderson was praised by MLA Ray Danyluk for her valued "behind the scenes" work with the provincial government.

"She and Donna [Chamberland] keep me informed about seniors' needs and challenges."

The afternoon's oldest walker was Hazel Hannah, who will turn 87 in October, and who read a poem written for her many years ago by her mother and preserved carefully in a scrapbook. Her daughter Lucille Smith, who joined Anderson, Faye Smith and Deanna Easthope on the organizing committee, presented her with a corsage from Scentsations in honor of the occasion.

The youngest walker was the nine-month-old great-grandson of Peggy Maas. Maas brought in the top figure of $957 in pledges, "thanks to my family - they're always supportive of me." She was presented with a certificate for dinner for two by Loree Aarbo of Outback 646 Ranch House.

All four ladies who brought in over $200 in pledges were eligible for the draw for the grand prize of dinner theatre tickets and accommodation at the Mayfield Inn, which went to a delighted Amelia Bowen. Norma Berg and Virginia Smereka also qualified for the draw.

Artwork and poems created by local students in praise of their grandparents filled Seniors Centre bulletin boards, with prizes going to five youngsters. Demica Taylor entered the winning poem in the Grade 6 category for a cash prize from Hilltop Service, while Dakota Gadwa was the Grade 4 and 5 winner for a prize sponsored by Elk Point Insurance. Rachael Walton won both the poetry and poster prizes for Grades 1 and 2, for prizes sponsored by Home Town Grocers and UFA. Robert Hayman was the top Grade 3 and 4 poster artist for a prize from Sears, while Katie Maennchen was the Grade 5 and 6 winner, her prize coming from Cal's Home Hardware.

They were "a little rusty and a bit short of dancers," according to Wanda Cochrane, but the Poltava performed by members of the Elk Point Ukrainian Dance Club was a big hit with the audience.

Three four-generation families were in attendance. Donna Gulayec introduced Peggy Maas' large contingent, while Jeannette Frisby and Norma Berg proudly introduced their groups.

Two tuneful "babas" with a strongly resemblance to Linda Grabas and Bernice Capjack wound up the entertainment, singing the praises of the community's grandparents.

Out for a Sunday stroll

Linda Grabas, Diana Anderson, Bernice Capjack, Denise Napier and daughters, MLA Ray Danyluk and Gordon Fakeley enjoy the sunny afternoon stroll as part of a huge contingent in the Grandparents' Day Walk-a-Thon. More photos on Pages 6 and 7.

Program aims to put money in producers' pockets

By CLARE GAUVREAU
Review Staff

A $200 per head calf set aside program announced Friday is part of a federal $718 million hand up to the struggling cattle industry. Its intent is to give cattle producers some options.

"It gives a person the opportunity to keep their cattle and get a little support," MLA Ray Danyluk said Friday.

The calf set aside program offers a $200 per head payment to producers to cover additional costs incurred in finishing the 2004 calf crop to slaughter weight. Animals registered under this program will have to be set aside for one year. The timeline is to allow for additional slaughter capacity to come on line.

Up to 40 per cent of the 2004 calf crop may have to be set aside but the exact number will be established with input from an industry advisory group.

"The program is very simple. It does not include packer-owned cattle. It could be a little higher than 40 per cent of the herd. It's pretty hard to assess but we're trying to get money into the pockets of producers. In combination with other programs it will help," Danyluk said.

"It gives a person the opportunity to keep their cattle and get a little support..."

MLA Ray Danyluk

"It will never be enough but we're trying to address as much as we can. Is it going to do the job? I don't know but we're trying to help."

Eligible animals must be tagged with an electronic ear tag and a portion of the payment will compensate producers for that tag.

Under the program in Alberta, calves that are set aside can still be marketed but are ineligible for slaughter until one year after their set aside date and are eligible for payment only once.

County of St. Paul Reeve Robert Bouchard would have been happier to see 100 per cent of the calf crop eligible if producers are going to retain them but agrees it does give producers a helping hand.

With the cost of feeding these calves through the winter at about $150 a head, Bouchard said the program "buys them (producers) some time."

Meanwhile, under a second national program, market ready cattle can be set aside until slaughter capacity increases. Once a management committee has determined how many animals in this category need to be set aside to balance the supply of fed cattle with slaughter capacity, producers will bid on program participation, based on their anticipated daily feed costs for a minimum 90-day set aside period. Alberta has added a component to this program called a basis component, which is designed to ensure producers are not negatively impacted if they delay marketing their cattle.

For more information on these programs and for application forms visit www.agric.gov.ab.ca or call (780) 422-9167.

Two candidates in Division 1 ring

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

With six days until nomination day for the County of St. Paul's general election, two candidates have declared their intention to run for the seat previously held by Allen Young in Division 1. Young had indicated he will not run for another term.

Darrell Youngmans of Heinsburg will be joined on the October 18 ballot by Glen Ockerman of Ferguson Flats. More candidates may be added before the September 20 deadline.

School division enrollment beats projections

By JAY GUTTERIDGE

Journal Staff

The St. Paul Education Regional Division school board received some good news at its meeting on September 8, as early enrollment came in higher than projected.

The number of students enrolled in kindergarten to Grade 12 in the division's standard schools is 43 higher than the projections, for a total of 3,872.

"It's a nice place to be with the money. We don't have to cut any staff by attrition," said superintendent Doug Yeo.

Last year, initial numbers indicated 161 fewer students enrolled than was projected, forcing the division into layoffs.

While the numbers aren't usually final until later in the month, Yeo expressed confidence they would remain higher than projections.

"It looks like nail biting season is over for another year," he said.

The division receives much of its funding based on enrollment numbers, which makes the board's financial situation more stable this year than last. Secretary-treasurer Jean Champagne said a ballpark figure for the increase in funding is $200,000 above the spring projections.

"If it stays full we should be able to break even this year," said Chairman Lorne Bury.

The numbers as of September 7 show the biggest positive difference in enrollment above projections at Elk Point Elementary, with 29 more students than projected. The school sat at 308 students at that point.

Glen Avon had the biggest negative difference from projections, sitting 38 lower at 501.

"I know we'll have to increase by at least one new teaching position," said Yeo, noting this would be divided into two half-time positions.

The overall numbers do not include the St. Paul Alternate Education Centre and the St. Paul Store Front Outreach School, as the Grade 10 to 12 students in those programs are funded on a different basis. SPAEC had 64 students enrolled as of September 7, 15 lower than projected. The Store Front campus had five enrollments.

SHOULD ONE HAVE TO SUBSIDIZE THE AUTO INSURANCE RATES OF THE OTHER?

Of course not. And under Alberta's new automobile insurance system experienced drivers with good driving records won't be subsidizing lower rates for new, inexperienced drivers. That just wouldn't be fair.

Connie Smereka Memorial Run and Walk

Fall time for adventure on the Iron Horse Trail

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

The fall beauty of the Iron Horse Trail will be the setting for a ride and drive adventure on September 25 and 26, coordinated by the East West Chapter of the Alberta Combined Driving Association (ACDA).

Everyone is welcome to ride horseback, drive a horse-drawn vehicle or catch a ride on one as the group makes the journey to Heinsburg on Saturday, September 25.

Departure time is 10 a.m. sharp from the staging area just south of Railway Avenue at 50 Street, Elk Point. A lunch stop is planned for Lindbergh as riders and drivers make their way eastward on the 34 km trek.

A potluck supper and jamboree-style entertainment are planned for Saturday evening in the cozy camp kitchen at Heinsburg's railway theme park.

The East West Chapter will serve up breakfast on Sunday, before the skills of riders and drivers are tested in a relaxed gymkhana environment to wind up the weekend of fun.

Walking the walk in Connie's memory

A few brave blossoms from Connie's Healing Garden still shivered in windblown gusts of icy rain on Sunday as friends and family of cancer victim Connie Smereka set out on their memorial run and walk to raise funds to help cancer victims.

Participants were fewer in number than last year, and the funds brought in were less, no doubt due to the blustery weather conditions, but the memory of the brave young woman wrapped like a warm blanket around those who slogged through the showers.

For the past 23 years, Canadians have honored the memory of another cancer victim, Terry Fox, whose efforts to raise money for cancer research have become legend. They have turned out in ever-increasing numbers each year since his death to help realize his dream.

Connie Smereka had a dream too, of helping fellow cancer victims. Family and friends helped to fulfill one of her final wishes, by packaging and selling wildflower seeds in the Connie's Healing Garden fundraiser during her final spring on this earth, and raising over $6000 for the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation. They have carried on that tradition in each of the three years since her passing, as well as organizing the annual run in her memory.

Like Terry Fox, Connie would be very proud of all those whose efforts continue to keep her dream alive.

Increased tourism, tax collection

FROM THE FILES OF THE LAKELAND REVIEW AND ELK POINT REVIEW FOR THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 14 IN...

1984

Tourism committee chairman Ron Barwick reported an astounding 1600 visitors at the Tourist Information Centre, which was staffed by a quartet of seniors. The battle over purchase of land for a recreation park ended in a split vote, with two motions to purchase the property defeated before a third passed with a three-to-two recorded vote.

1989

Member of Parliament Deborah Grey presided over the ribbon cutting for the official opening of the Elk Point Further Education Centre. An "absolutely phenomenal" 88.1 percent of Elk Point's 1989 taxes had already been paid, administrator Pat Vincent told a pleased Town Council.

1994

Town Council was concerned with ongoing incidents of vandalism at Elk Point Recreation Park, with Mayor Ed Buck stating that it might be necessary to close the park if the incidents continued. Elk Point Chamber of Commerce reported a 13 percent increase in visitors to the Tourist Information Centre, well above the 10 percent goal set when the building was renovated.

1999

The County of St. Paul put its foot down on burying oily waste sand in roadbed construction, despite approval from the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board. The Community Advisory Policing Committee learned the history of the RCMP statue along Highway 41, and posed for a picture with the monument 25 years and one day after its dedication, to show continued support for the local RCMP.

GUEST COLUMN

Learning appreciation for what we have

A man stood before one of J. M. W. Turner's unrivaled paintings and said, "I can see nothing in it." Then the artist replied, "Don't you wish you could?"

I don't know how many of you know anything about J. M. W. Turner, but let me summarize a little bit about him. He is Joseph Mallord William Turner and he lived from 1775 to 1851. He is known as the Father of the Impressionists and is one of the greatest artists of all time. His gift to humanity was over 20,000 items including hundreds of oil paintings and thousands of watercolors. In fact, on June 14, 2001, a Turner work broke another world record auction price. His beautiful watercolor design, "Heidelberg with a Rainbow" was sold at Sotheby's London auction for 2,380,500 pounds, roughly $3,500,00.

Now back to the statement that the man made when he stood in front of Turner's painting. He said: "I can see nothing in it." With the brief information I have given you about the artist, you are probably asking: "How could that person make that comment?" Actually, there are probably quite a few people of all ages who have been known to make the comment: "I can see nothing in it." How many students do you know who have said to their parents: "Why do we have to study that in school, I'll never use it!" Or, what about some of us as adults who are so busy with our lives that we say we have too little time or too many troubles. The reasons abound, but the result is the same: we travel through life as if we've never taken the trip, missing it all.

EASTHOPE
from the FCSS desk

But the happiest people in the world are not those who have easy days, painless relationships or lives without loss.

The happiest people are those, whatever their lot, who have learned the art of appreciation. They don't expect of the earth what it can't deliver: live without frustration. Instead, they revel in what it can give. Sometimes it takes an eye to see it. Andrew Wyeth once said that the colors beneath a stalk of wheat drove him wild with joy. He said he'd give anything to capture that on canvas.

A mother, watching her infant in a baby swing, noticed the child's eyes light up with sudden understanding. The baby thrust his hand forward toward a toy, widely missing the mark, but it was a moment of discovery - the first time he'd ever reached for something. Seeing the miracle of that ordinary step in human development, the mother soared all day. The colors beneath a stalk of wheat, a baby doing a very usual thing - most of us would not be filled with wonder at such moments, but we are the poorer for it.

We must learn to see and understand, stop and revel in life's bounteous gifts to us. Feeling appreciation for what we have gives us strength to deal with what we don't have and grants us happiness in the gray days. Let us not stand before the world and say, "I see nothing in it," for the only true reply is, "Don't you wish you could?"

This all reminds me that tonight is Information Night at the Elks Hall from 7 to 9 p.m. Come, see and appreciate what is happening in our community of Elk Point.

"Feeling appreciation for what we have gives us strength to deal with what we don't have and grants us happiness in the gray days..."

LRA's best compete at Showdown 2004

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

It was wild, it was western, and it was the highlight of the season for both competitors and fans, as the Lakeland Rodeo Association wound up the year with Showdown 2004, September 2 to 5 in St. Paul's Clancy Richard Arena.

The first four performances got off to a thrilling start, with six teams of tough and determined youngsters competing in the Junior Wild Horse Race. St. Paul Musical Riders performed their polished routines for appreciative crowds before the Friday and Sunday rodeos.

Bareback bronc rider Denny Phipps of Marshall, SK came into the finals in third place and never looked back, gathering up two firsts, two seconds and a third/fourth split to almost double the points of his nearest competitor, Rob

Australian cowboy Mark O'Dempsey marked a 75 on Miller Rodeo's Farmer Joe at Thursday's rodeo to start his climb toward the Saddle Bronc championship

Johnson of Drayton Valley. Johnson placed fourth on Thursday, tied with season leader Matt Crowe on Friday to split first and second and came back from Saturday afternoon's buck-off to win Saturday night's go-round. His hopes were dashed Sunday when he slapped Miller Rodeo's "Fraggle Rock" in mid-ride, while Phipps placed second with a 72.5 mark on Doubletree's "Blue Moon."

Steve Friend of Viking benefited from the LRA's new average points as for his win in the steer wrestling. Running times for each of the three steer wrestlers to gain points in all five go-rounds were totaled and divided by five to add points to those gathered in the go-rounds to determine the winner. Dean Lawes of Provost placed second overall.

The future of rodeo is in good hands, with contestants like those in the novice horse riding, junior bulls and junior steers moving up the ranks.

Clem Lowry of Perryvale gathered up two first place scores and three seconds over the weekend and was the only competitor to complete all five rides to win the novice horse riding. He also rode all five junior bulls, marking three firsts and two seconds, to win the junior bull riding, despite coming into the finals in fourth place. Lowry won the Dusty Wilkinson Memorial award for the junior bulls, as well as the Showdown championship.

The junior steer riders did the best of all rough stock events in terms of completed rides, with only one buck-off all weekend. Season leader Tyler Patten of Buck Lake narrowly edged out Jacob Anderson of Niton Junction for the championship.

Jacqueline Stojan of Mayerthorpe won the average and championship in the ladies' barrel racing with five good runs. Lonnie Shulko of Smoky Lake clocked the fastest run of the weekend, with a sizzling 13.125 in the final performance.

Jacey Jones of Delburne won the junior barrels, and was one of two competitors to leave all the barrels standing throughout the weekend. Lone male barrel racer Jesse Scherger of Edson also was successful in completing five clean runs.

Calf roping season leader Travis Hubl of Eckville came back from a 'no time' in the first performance to turn in the fastest run of the rodeo, an 8.5, on Friday night. He tied with Steve Horricks of Sherwood Park in the points race after five performances, and bettered his earlier winning time by a tenth of a second in the tiebreaker, while Horricks tripped the clock at 9.4 seconds.

Australia's 2003 champion saddle bronc rider Mark O'Dempsey is now an international champion, after winning Showdown on Sunday, the only competitor to successfully complete all five rides, picking up three first place scores and a second along the way.

Brothers Vince and Mark Flynn of New Norway claimed both the season leader honors and the championship in the team roping. The duo last claimed the championship in 1992.

The bulls were the clear winners in the first go-round of the bull riding, and continued to take a toll throughout the weekend, with a total of 36 buck-offs. Champion Miles Pennington of Stettler hit the dirt in the first three go-rounds, but came back to place first Saturday night and Sunday for the win. Darren Makoloski was the only other bull rider to complete two rides, with the first successful ride of the rodeo on Friday and a second place score on Sunday.

Achievement Day for 4-H Poultry Project members

Fun with feathered friends

Alanna Ockerman, Robyn Ockerman and Kayla Gibson urge two hens and a turkey toward the finish line in the final heat of the poultry races at Elk Point 4-H Club's Poultry Project achievement day. At top right, Alanna and Robyn introduce their birds to some young Achievement Day visitors. The day also included presentations by each member on what they had learned this year, a fine meal prepared by the members from their home grown poultry, and the presentation of certificates and awards to (at right, left to right) Kayla Gibson, Alanna Ockerman, Tyson Ockerman, Robyn Ockerman and Marvin Ockerman.

Getting back to school means getting back to reading. If you're looking for ideas and help with book selection, stop in and ask our knowledgeable staff for assistants.

We have a great selection of "Step Into Reading" series. This series features a series of steps which make learning to read fun and rewarding. Choosing the right books will keep their interest and allow them to find reading enjoyable, not frustrating.

We have a great selection of titles for girls and boys to help with the learning process.

New Junior picks

International best-selling series "Mustang Mountain" brings #6 - Brave Horse by Sharon Simon. Read all the exciting books in the series, where adventure awaits in the Rocky Mountains.

As seen on Cartoon Network on TV, "The Justice League Adventure Comics" are suitable for all ages and a great way to interest reluctant readers.

The Quist Family - dad Cliff, daughter Leslie, son Shane and daughter Jill Goulet - was featured at Elk Point Baptist Church's well-attended Fall Roundup on Sunday, September 5. Songs by Kerry Anderson and Sherry Oszust, a thought-provoking message by Pastor Jim MacLellan and an Alberta beef barbecue were also part of the event, which brought together the community and the church as summer drew to an end.

School division's high school completion rates rising

By JAY GUTTERIDGE
St. Paul Journal Staff

More students in the St. Paul Education Regional Division are completing high school within five years now than they were four years ago.

Superintendent Doug Yeo reported the figures to the school board at it's Sept. 8 meeting.

"It's cause for celebration. It really is," he said.

Of the division's students who entered Grade 10 in 1995, 66.9 per cent graduated in 2000. By comparison, of the students who entered Grade 10 in 1999, 72.2 per cent are projected to graduate this year. Next year's projection is a 73.9 per cent completion rate.

However, St. Paul Education's completion rates from 1999 to 2003 are generally slightly lower than the provincial rates.

ASBA policy

A member of the board is likely to speak on an Alberta School Boards Association policy directive at the ASBA annual general meeting this fall.

"One of the proposals by Wetaskiwin regarding federal student tuition; we have a big stake in that proposal," said secretary-treasurer Jean Champagne.

The proposal seeks a new way of negotiating tuition agreements with the federal government, with one potential option being the province conducting negotiations on behalf of all Alberta boards, Champagne said in an interview after the meeting.

St. Paul Education has one of the highest numbers of federal students of any board in the province, and Champagne said the proposal would not give the division enough of a voice.

"We kind of want to be at the table, too," he said

Store Front School

The division's Store Front Campus was approved by Alberta Learning as an Outreach Program, meaning it will receive an extra $52,000 in funding, Yeo reported.

However, the board is monitoring the situation at the St. Paul and District Boys and Girls Club, which is experiencing some financial difficulties with regards to its building. The board shares the building with the club, as it is home to the Store Front Outreach School.

"There's absolutely no doubt the Boys and Girls Club is very needed in the Town of St. Paul," said chief-deputy superintendent Carmen Brodzia.

The division will monitor the situation to determine whether it will have to move the Store Front School.

Regional boiler

The division received more good news from Alberta Infrastructure.

After the announcement of the $20 million overhaul of St. Paul's schools, the division also learned that St. Paul Regional High School received funding for a new boiler.

The boiler cost about $283,000.

LAPP

The division will be paying a little more into one pension plan this year.

The Local Authorities Pension Plan covers some of the division's staff, such as central office and maintenance workers. The plan's rates increased by 2 per cent.

"I guess our lucky streak ran out when we got this," Champagne joked.

The rate increase will probably increase the division's costs by about $17,000, he said.

Computer program

Teachers who need new personal computers will soon no longer be able to get financial help from the division.

The board decided to discontinue the Computer Purchase Program as of Jan. 31, 2005 due to lack of interest.

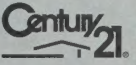

"We're wondering if that program has kind of outlived its usefulness," said Champagne. "Out initial reason for putting it in was to help new teachers acquire the technology. Now you can get a new computer for $500."

The program provided financing for teachers to buy computers.

Lunch kit "treats" for the new school year

As you and your children shop for supplies for school lunches you are faced with many decisions. The grocery aisles are full of treats, marketed in some way to catch your child's attention. How do you choose? What should you look for before you decide to put that particular product in your shopping cart? The following are some guidelines to help you make those decisions.

1. Choose nutrition first. Make sure that you have something from each of the four food groups to go into the lunch kit. To help you achieve a good balance in food selection, let the shopping cart be your guide. Use the biggest compartment of the shopping cart for grain products, vegetables and fruits, the smaller "child seat" for milk products, meats and alternates, and the undershelf for the "other foods."

2. Use the information from food labels. In 2002 Health Canada enacted legislation that requires most foods to have a nutrition label. From that date, companies had anywhere from three to five years, depending on the size of the company, to comply with that legislation.

You've probably noticed many products in the store with the new Nutrition Facts label. Unlike the previous nutrition labels, called Nutrition Information, which were voluntary (ie. companies could choose whether or not they would use a nutrition label) and could vary in size, format and information, these new labels are standardized in format and content. They contain a listing of ingredients, beginning with the ingredient of highest content, and Nutrition Facts, with the amount of calories plus a minimum of thirteen specified nutrients in a given serving size.

3. When looking at the labels, look at the Ingredients first. Look for products in which the first ingredients are from one of the four food groups, eg. fruits, nuts, cereal, milk, rather than sugars, fats or oils. Try to avoid, or choose less often, products that contain hydrogenated oils and shortenings, and those that are high in sugar (especially in the absence of other nutrients,) salt and fat.

4. Check out the Nutrition Facts. First thing is the serving size. Remember, if your child is going to eat 2 or more servings of the product, the nutrients have to be multiplied by the number of servings actually eaten. One example of this is the Milk 2 Go container - one serving is 250 ml, but the container is 500 ml, providing two servings of Milk Products. This information helps you to evaluate your intake according to Canada's Food Guide to Healthy Eating.

5. Watch the Nutrition Claims, eg. Fat Free. Often these products are just as high in calories as the regular higher fat product, because the fat has been replaced with sugar.

6. Watch for imitations. For example, fruit leathers can be made mainly from fruits, such as Fruit to Go, while imitations may be made from sugar, oils, and only a small amount of fruit or fruit juice, such as Fruit by the Foot. Go with the products containing more real fruit, reminding your child to practice good dental habits after eating. If a toothbrush is not near, have them eat an apple or a piece of cheese, or rinse their mouth out with water.

7. Pre-made lunch packs, for example, those containing high-fat processed meat, crackers and cheese, are high in fat and sodium. With a little creative planning, you can make your own lunch pack - one that will most likely be more nutritious and less costly.

8. Keep a list of treats that meet your standards and meet the children's taste test. In a separate column, keep a list of those that don't measure up. Each time you go to the grocery store, take your treat list and evaluate one or more new products to add to your list. Before you know it, you'll be a whiz at evaluating products in the grocery store.

9. Remember that there's room for all foods in a healthy diet. An occasional small chocolate bar or small bag of cheezies is not going to create an unhealthy child. The key word is occasional, with the focus on making healthy choices most of the time.
